'I FEEL VERY GUILTY'

GUILLLEN LOVES FIDEL CASTRO?
FORMER WHITE SOX MANAGER
WANTS TO EXPLAIN HIMSELF

Miami Marlins
manager Ozzie Guillen
US PRESSWIRE

MCT

PHILADELPHIA Well, that didn't take long.

Notoriously outspoken Miami Marlins manager Ozzie Guillen, who was traded by the White Sox near the end of the 2011 season, was expected to return to Miami after the team's game Monday to deal with his first controversy of the season.

Guillen has been under fire since reports surfaced that the upcoming edition of Time magazine quotes him as saying, "I love Fidel Castro."

Guillen, a native of Venezuela, said he would explain his comments about the Cuban dictator during a news conference Tuesday at Marlins Park and invited anyone to attend who wants to ask a question or hear what he has to say. It's a day off for the team.

"I don't want to make a statement because I think when you make a statement, it's a bunch of crap," he said. "I want people to look at my eyes and look at my face and see what's going on, tell what the deal was, and that's it."

Guillen said he has been troubled and unable to sleep the past three nights since the story broke.

"I feel very guilty about it and very bad and sad and very embarrassed," he said.

Guillen said he has spoken to a number of people with ties to Cuba and offered apologies, including longtime

FIRE HIM?

Several Miami-Dade County officials on Monday denounced Ozzie Guillen's comments about Fidel Castro and want him removed from his job. Asked if he was concerned about losing his job, Guillen said, "I hope not. Why? I'm Latino. I lived in Miami for 12 years. I know how people feel about that. I've got a lot of friends, a lot of players [who] play for me, they know who I am. They know how I feel, what I mean."

Marlins Spanish announcer Felo Ramirez.

"The saddest part of this was to apologize to Felo Ramirez. That was hard. I did, face to face," Guillen said.

Guillen didn't deny making the comments about Castro but seemed surprised at how his remarks were portrayed in the Time article.

"I don't want to put the guy in the spotlight. The interview was about sport, not politics," he said. "You read what it was, it comes out different way. I can't control that. I have to wear it, I have to face it. I have to grab the bull by the horns, and I will do it [Tuesday]."

"I want the people there. Whoever wants to ask me any questions, I'm willing to answer."

MEAN MEME

While the usually Twitter-happy Ozzie Guillen (@ozzieguillen) has been tweet-free since the Fidel Castro quote controversy erupted, on Monday his problem became a popular—and cruel—hashtag fueled by Daniel Tosh (@danieltosh): #ozziemisquotes. Here are a handful of tweets mocking Guillen.

CTA pilgrimage of 143 stations

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 » tswartz@tribune.com
 » @tracyswartz

Like some Chicago Catholics, Aidan Gillespie of Pilsen performed the Stations of the Cross last week to prepare for Easter—except he did it using CTA stations.

Gillespie, 24, said he traveled the length of the CTA rail system to visit 10 churches to reflect and pray about Jesus' crucifixion, which is detailed in the Stations of the Cross. He chronicled his journey on his blog, lstop2.tumblr.com.

Along the way he stopped at the Baha'i House of Worship in Wilmette off the Linden Purple Line stop, and St. Therese in Chinatown off the Cermak-Chinatown Red Line stop, among other places of worship. As he traveled to each church, he listened to podcasts at pray-as-you-go.org, which offers daily prayer downloads.

Gillespie said the trip took him about 17 hours, about the same amount of time it as last year, his first year performing the CTA Stations of the Cross.

"I started thinking about pilgrimage and how I could incorporate a modern pilgrimage in my own city with Lent," Gillespie said about the origins of the trip. "It's pretty personal and quiet. I think that's one of the nice things about the trip."

Gillespie's feat is kind of a twist on the "L"

Challenge, in which CTA riders try to ride the entire rail system through all 143 stops. Riders can run and bus between stops, but they can't use cars or taxis, according to the unofficial but widely accepted rule book.

Adham Fisher of the U.K., a rail enthusiast who travels to different cities to ride the length of train systems, set the course record last year at 9 hours, 36 minutes, 33 seconds.

A few groups have attempted this challenge; one student group was honored by CTA President Forrest Claypool in August, though it didn't beat Fisher's time.

Scott Presslak, 26, of Portage Park, and Kevin Olsta, 27, of Lakeview, said they set a course record Friday by completing the challenge in 9 hours, 24 minutes, 5 seconds.

But Chicago may not get to "L"-ebrate for long. Fisher told Going Public he plans to return to the Second City later this month to reclaim his crown, thus putting the "ride" in "pride."

Action requested

The Active Transportation Alliance, the biking, cycling and transit riding advocacy group, is seeking volunteers to distribute information about transit legislation at downtown transit stations. Riders for Better Transit Day of Action will be at Union Station from 5-8 p.m. Thursday.

If you don't have kids or you've never had the pleasure of putting random scribbles on your fridge, you're in luck. The stairwells in the Pulaski Orange Line station feature doodles in brightly colored ink. It's as if a child with no talent has taken to scribbling along the walls of this West Elsdon station with every color in the Crayola pack. It doesn't matter if the graffiti is from kids or adults, it needs to be fully cleansed from the station. The only color that should matter here is Orange.

Hudson case goes to court

Defense team's task: Find jurors who can handle high-profile trial

Chicago Tribune

With his fate hanging in the balance, William Balfour now knows most of the people who will decide whether he spends the rest of his life in prison in the slayings of singer Jennifer Hudson's mother, brother and nephew.

So far they include a college student, a junior-high math teacher, a physical therapist, a truck driver, a former prison guard and a woman who works for a local chocolate company.

Fourteen people were picked Monday for the Balfour jury in part because of their ability to maintain an impassive demeanor under intense questioning.

But as every trial attorney and courtroom observer knows, looks can be deceiving—particularly in a high-profile case involving a celebrity.

Balfour, who was estranged from Hudson's sister, Julia, at the time of the 2008 slayings, is accused of shooting the actress's mother, Darnell Donerson; brother Jason Hudson; and nephew Julian King, 7. The killings marked a tragic turn in an inspiring rags-to-riches story that elevated Hudson to iconic levels in her hometown.

Given Hudson's local popularity, Balfour's legal team faces the arduous task of finding 18 people—12 jurors and six alternates—who won't let the horrific or high-profile nature of the case affect their judgment, legal experts said. It's easier said than done as jurors aren't always forthcoming about their biases or preconceived notions about celebrity trials, experts said.

"They have a hard job ahead of them," said

THE FIRST 14

The 14 jurors selected so far were picked from among the first 46 people questioned individually Monday. They consist of a racially mixed group of seven men and seven women from many walks of life. Four more will be selected Tuesday for the monthlong trial.

criminal-defense lawyer Sam Adam Jr., who successfully represented singer R. Kelly in a 2008 child pornography case, but does not represent Balfour. "It's difficult to find people in Chicago who don't like Jennifer Hudson. If it were ... Charlie Sheen, maybe people wouldn't care. But this is Jennifer Hudson. People love her in this city."

Opening statements are scheduled to take place April 23.

Warning: It's now wildfire season

Chicago Tribune

The National Weather Service issued a "red flag warning" for northern Illinois and northwest Indiana on Monday because warm, dry and windy weather could "become favorable for rapid growth of wildfires."

Red flag warnings are common in the spring and fall months, before and after the growing season, when dry cold fronts are followed by warm, windy weather, weather service meteorologist Kevin Birk said. Although the warm spring has caused grass and other plants to burst out much earlier than usual, there's still a lot of dry, dead plant material around, Birk said. Several brush fires ignited around the Chicago area Monday afternoon, including one that did $20,000 in damage at the headquarters of OfficeMax in Naperville, fire officials said.

This spring has seen several red flag warnings because of the record-breaking warm March weather and dry conditions, Birk said. The warning Monday included most of northern Illinois and northwest Indiana.

EXPRESS LINES

- » After failing to procure beer from a Noble Square liquor store, a Chicago man approached a woman nearby and used a toy gun to try to rob her of $2 before he was tackled by a bystander, authorities said.
- » The transponder on the plane that crashed into a Florida grocery store last week with two Illinois men aboard had malfunctioned earlier, according to a preliminary report released Monday by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Grand jury won't hear Martin case

6 ORLANDO, Fla. The special prosecutor investigating the shooting death of unarmed Florida teenager Trayvon Martin has ruled out using a grand jury in the case, meaning her office alone will decide whether to charge shooter George Zimmerman with a crime.

The case has captured national attention, largely because of race. Martin, 17, was black and Zimmerman, 28, who has not been charged, is white and Hispanic.

Police in the town of Sanford declined to arrest Zimmerman after the shooting, saying they found no evidence to contradict his account that he acted in self-defense.

The state attorney previously investigating the shooting, Norm Wolfinger, had said the case would go to a grand jury Tuesday. That grand jury would have decided whether to charge Zimmerman, but Wolfinger removed himself from the case March 22.

THE PROSECUTOR

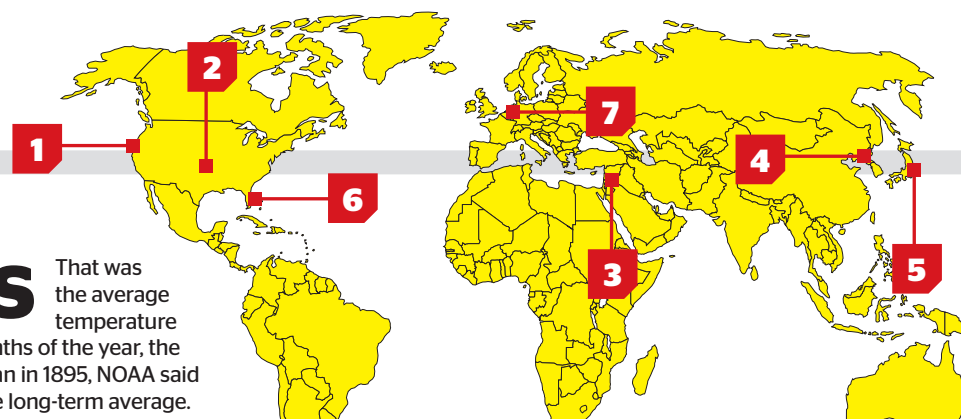

Angela Corey's decision appeared to confirm her reputation as a tough-minded prosecutor who does not shy away from deciding how to handle difficult cases. "It's very bold on her part," said David Weinstein, a former Florida state and federal prosecutor. "She has no qualms about whatever decision she is going to make."

Florida Gov. Rick Scott appointed Angela Corey, a seasoned state attorney in Jacksonville, to take over the case.

"We are not surprised by this announcement and, in fact, are hopeful that a decision will be reached very soon to arrest George Zimmerman and give Trayvon Martin's family the simple justice they have been seeking," Benjamin Crump, a Martin family attorney, said in a statement.

Chicago Fire player Arne Friedrich
LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE PHOTOS

GERN

The Fire's latest import has a world-class pedigree. Can he help the team return to the playoffs?

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

No. 23 on a sports jersey is special in Chicago.

Michael Jordan brought the Bulls a dynasty with that number. Devin Hester ran with it to the Super Bowl, although the Bears didn't win that year. Cubs legend Ryne Sandberg also wore that number, as did White Sox fielder Jermaine Dye when he was named MVP of the 2005 World Series.

Now Arne Friedrich (pronounced Ar-nuh Freed-rick)—the Chicago Fire's newly signed German defender—wants to lead the team to the playoffs with those iconic digits.

"It's a hard way to go. When we have reached it, we can win everything," he said at Toyota Park in Bridgeview.

Dressed comfortably in jeans and a blue zip-up sweatshirt after a Friday practice in March, the floppy-haired Friedrich is polite and friendly. But make no mistake, he is all business on the field.

The arrival of Friedrich, who moved to Chicago from Berlin last month, comes as the Fire have struggled to make the playoffs the past two seasons despite a push late last year. The team advanced to the conference finals in 2007, 2008 and 2009 but has come up short since then. Friedrich, under contract for one year, is expected to make his Major League Soccer debut—and perhaps kick-start the team's prospects—on Sunday in a home game against the Houston Dynamo.

The defender brings an impressive resume that spans a dozen years—nearly all of them spent on rosters of top tier German teams, including Bundesliga's Hertha BSC. The 32-year-old, who grew up idolizing Argentina's Diego Maradona, has been named by Fox Soccer as one of the top MLS newcomers to watch this year.

He has gone head to head with (and defeated) soccer stars David Beckham, Cristiano Ronaldo and Lionel Messi. Perhaps his biggest feat is appearing in 82 outings for Germany's national team in international matches. He played in two European championship tournaments, helped Germany finish third in the 2006 World Cup and scored a goal in a 2010 World Cup quarter-final win over Argentina.

Friedrich, who at age 5 started kicking around the ball in the streets of Bad Oeynhausen in western Germany, has so far es-

In the States, soccer is not so important than er sports and nobody knows me here," Fried- h said. "It's very nice and I can go out for dinner a quiet, in a silent area.

There's not so much hurry in the city and the ple are very nice and very kind. Everybody ed you how you are feeling and you have so ny small talks and this is what I like. You have a big skyline here," said Friedrich, who lives in ncoln Park.

The first time he visited Chicago was this year meet with Fire staff and a trainer.

"When I saw the city from the airplane, it was amazing, I fell in love the first time," he said.

He's talked to Fire teammate Pavel Pardo and mer New York Red Bulls goalkeeper Frank st, who both played in Germany, about his de- sion to come to MLS and how playing in Europe mpares with the U.S.

"The difference between the leagues in Europe is not so big as I have expected it. Physically they are very strong in the MLS," he said. "It's a good chance to get a new experience here and so far I like the city very, very much and as well the club. There's so many nice people here and good team-mates."

Friedrich has fit into the team and is a leader who sets an example for younger players by taking care of his body and carrying himself in a professional way, team captain Logan Pause said.

While Friedrich has been plagued by injuries and recovered from knee, foot and back surgeries in the past, he is proving resilient.

"You can tell he wants to be here, that he's excited about being here," Pause said. "He plays another cog in the wheel of what we're trying to do, someone with experience, someone who's played at the highest level and that has won. You want winners on your team."

With a need to strengthen the area down the middle of the field, Fire coach Frank Klopas zeroed in on Friedrich and called the decision to bring him to Chicago a "no-brainer."

"It's a good move because he's a very good player," Klopas said. "He's at a very good age that he's got a lot more to offer to any team."

1 Besides boos, what might Aramis Ramirez be hearing at Wrigley this week?

Cubs Fan 1: "Man, that guy looks familiar. Wanna hang by Chicago Dogs?" Cubs Fan 2: "Why do you think we came?"

"How is it a strike if he didn't swing?"

"Another tough outing for Kerry Wood ..."

The docile sounds of a drunk bimbo falling down the bleachers.

Crickets.

2 What's behind the Bulls' recent slow starts?

Maybe Rose is a late bloomer (sorry for that).

Thibs' voice is a little rough at the start of games.

That darn camera angle is a problem. They should change it to "2K" view.

Tom Robo-Deau 5000 coaching computer chip not activated until 6-minute mark of first quarter.

Someone switched their Gatorade to Turtleade.

3 Ozzie Guillen's already had a controversy in Miami. How surprised are you?

As surprised as I'll be by the Kardashian-Kanye two-hour pay-per-view breakup.

Very. These people root for LeBron, I figured they were pretty much cool with anything.

I'm not shocked, I knew he would take his talents there.

Just waiting for him to insult steel workers when he takes over the Pirates.

As surprised as someone watching "The Sixth Sense" for the sixth time.

4 What's your prediction for the Blackhawks-Phoenix series?

If the Hawks can't take advantage of their playoff experience, it'll be Coyote ugly.

Most Hawks fans will finally get to experience the joy that is Adrian Aucoin.

A lot of "un-sobers" being rude on the North Side of Chicago, then they'll see that the Blackhawks lost.

Like the Clovers over the Toros in "Bring it On." That means Hawks in six.

A lot of grumbling about the prowess of Coyotes goalie Mike Smith.

5 Phoenix plays at Jobing.com Arena. How mad does that make you?

It depends. Define "jobing."

To find out how much I hate obtrusive advertisements, go to twitter.com/scottbolohan.

Pretty hot; lookingforwork.gov and myresumeisgarbage.org seem like better places to play.

Like "Phoenix has a team but Quebec doesn't" mad.

Who's Jo Bing?

Less Hester ...

With the addition of Eric Weems and Devin Thomas, two players with experience as kickoff returners, the Bears are pondering whether Devin Hester should be relieved of all kickoff-return duties in 2012. "We have that versatility now," coach Lovie Smith said. Last year Hester returned 33 kickoffs for 723 yards, including a touchdown. If the Bears are serious about this, which means playing him more at receiver, they should cure him of the drowsies first.

... and no Forte?

This year's offseason workouts begin Monday, and the team will be without running back Matt Forte if he doesn't sign the tender he received as the team's franchise player or a long-term contract isn't worked out. Barring a breakthrough, Forte will be absent as the Bears get going. That's not necessarily a reason to fret. The offseason program is "voluntary"; the only mandatory period for players is one full-squad minicamp. See? There's plenty of time to panic later, Bears fans.

HOT DATE WEDNESDAY

That's when Chicago Wolves playoff tickets go on sale, at 11 a.m. The regular season ends Sunday, and the team is on the verge of clinching its 15th post-season berth in 18 years.

THE MOUTHWATCH

"I think I'm feeling a little more confident that Thursday might be the day, but we'll see when that time comes."

—Blackhawks captain Jonathan Toews, on whether he'll play in the team's playoff opener Thursday at Phoenix. He added that it would be a game-time decision.

THE FINISH LINE

» Milwaukee 7, Cubs 5

» White Sox 4, Cleveland 2

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

We're not saying America's passion for Ryan Gosling went into hibernation for the winter, but the Canadian hunk of many muscles and many more acting skills has been bursting back onto the scene lately like those tulips on Michigan Avenue. (We only hope the frost doesn't kill them—or him.) On the heels of all the new developments, here's a timeline of our favorite moments that turned the Gosling from man into myth. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

WELCOME TO SPRING:
RYAN GOSLING FEVER IS BLOOMING AGAIN

FRESHLY

REDEYE PHOTO
ILLUSTRATIONDECEMBER 2010*Hey, girl...

While the Tumblr (Bleep) Yeah! Ryan Gosling was launched in late 2008, it didn't become a phenomenon until Ryan was doing promotional tours for "Blue Valentine." MTV was smart enough to get a video of him doing an interpretive reading. (This makes up for "Jersey Shore," guys.)

AUGUST 2011Break it up, dudes!

A teenage girl just happened to be filming a street fight when, all of a sudden, the Gosling swoops in to break things up. Best of all, he's decked out in sweats, a tank top and RIDICULOUS biceps, later telling MTV "I had just come from the gymnasium" (swoon).

NOVEMBER 2011And the sexiest man alive is...

Not Ryan! How did this happen? After Bradley Cooper was named People's sexiest of 2011, irate people with way too much time on their hands took to the streets outside the mag's offices to protest the egregious error in judgment. 2012 is so his year.

APRIL 3*He really is a hero

British people often forget to look both ways when crossing American streets—and that's exactly what happened when Ryan swooped in to save a woman from being hit by a taxi. Reports indicate he did not say "hey, girl."

SUNDAYGosling egg-hunt

A New York woman hid plastic Easter eggs all over the city with special messages from @GoslingEaster inside. Sample message: "I'm dipping myself in chocolate for you." Ryan didn't have a hand in this one (that we know of), but that didn't stop our hearts from hopping.

THE DIGITS

$29.95

That's the price of Mattel's new Katniss Everdeen Barbie doll—pre-orders for which began Monday. The doll, based on the "Hunger Games" heroine, will be available in August.

97%

That's the amount of viewers "Game of Thrones" retained from its season premiere, thr.com reports. 3.8 million people watched Sunday night's 8 p.m. showing; 3.9 million watched the April 1 premiere. 1.1 million also tuned in at 10 p.m. Sunday.

HOT DATE

JULY 10

If you missed Fiona Apple's shows last month at Lincoln Hall, fear not. She'll be back in Chicago—at the Congress Theater—on July 10 as part of a larger summer tour, pitchfork.com reports.

“ I DON'T KNOW. WELL, EVERYONE HAS TO LEAVE.”

—Kristen Wiig, on Alec Baldwin's podcast on Monday, sort of but not really addressing reports that she'll be leaving "Saturday Night Live" at season's end. She continued: "I will say that when I do leave it's not because I'm sick of it and not because I see something better or anything like that."

Hathaway gets short

"The Dark Knight Rises" star Anne Hathaway turned heads over the weekend with a new short 'do. The actress's close-cropped haircut is for her role in a movie adaptation of "Les Misérables," co-starring Hugh Jackman and Russell Crowe, people.com reports.

Getting 'Desperate'

Eva Longoria isn't ready for "Desperate Housewives" to end after its eighth season. "I think I'm in denial right now," Longoria told people.com. "It's going to be sad, but I'm excited to move on." Which raises the question: "Desperate Housewives" still is on TV?!

So emotional

The public wasn't welcome at Whitney Houston's funeral, but it still will foot the bill for police overtime. Final price tag for the city of Newark, N.J.: $187,000. Perhaps not surprisingly, some residents of the city are not pleased, usatoday.com reports. That represents roughly 5 percent of Newark's annual budget, the newspaper reports.
